Everyday Shakespeare

In his play Julius Caesar, William Shakespeare warned, “Beware the Ides of March” (March 15). Lucky for all lovers of the bard that Shakespeare Week falls from March 24 to March 30.

Shakespeare Week was begun in 2014 by the Shakespeare Birthplace Trust in England. Its goal is to make Shakespeare delightful, not dull. His works are part of the curriculum for half of the world’s schoolchildren. For many, the writings of Shakespeare are remembered as difficult, mandatory high school reading. But, in Shakespeare’s day, his plays were considered bawdy, coarse, and boisterous, and theaters were often dirty, loud, and very crowded—some holding crowds of up to 3,000 people. A three-hour play was considered a rollicking good time. Shakespeare knew his audience.

Though many now consider Shakespeare’s plays to be examples of great literature, a part of high culture, or difficult to understand, Shakespeare wrote to his audience—many of whom were common folks just like himself. He was sure to include plenty of jokes, fights, love triangles, and off-color remarks.

Shakespeare has seeped into our everyday life. Many common expressions were written by Shakespeare, including:

“Wild goose chase” (Romeo and Juliet)

“Seen better days” (As You Like It)

“Off with his head.” (Richard III)

“Good riddance.” (Troilus and Cressida)

“Knock, knock! Who’s there?” (Macbeth)

“Break the ice.” (The Taming of the Shrew)

Utter one of these phrases between March 24 and March 30, and you might be celebrating Shakespeare Week without even knowing it!

Priscilla Sherman

Resident of the Month March 2025

Priscilla Sherman was born March 14 in Buffalo, New York. She has always enjoyed singing, and sang in the church choir and at many events. Her mother was a concert pianist, and taught her to play piano from a young age as well.

For a time Priscilla worked as a medical technologist. She and her husband, Arthur, were married for many years. Together they had five children, Tom, Carol, Hannah, Ruth, and Theodosia (a Biblical name). Today, she has many grandchildren as well. Priscilla has always loved animals, particularly dogs and horses. She loved horseback riding when she was younger, and even toured the Grand Canyon on horseback!

Priscilla moved to Zimmerman Place in November of 2017, and we couldn’t be happier to have her here. You may see Priscilla around attending our live music, taking a stroll outside, or spending time with our visiting cats and dogs. When you see Priscilla around, be sure to say, “Hello!”, you will be glad you did!
